

Do You Use Your Own Judgment

when buying a suit of clothes or do you depend upon the sales-man's advice?

Do you realize that his advice may be influenced by the large profit that there is in some make?

Study the situation yourself; compare the quality of fabric and the tailoring in garments of different makes; the style, fit and general finish; take particular notice of those that bear this label:

They are tailored by those famous Wholesale-Tailors of Rochester,

The Stein-Bloch Co.

We sell them, but do not want to influence you unduly. Be as critical as you please; look at every detail; try on a suit and compare the effect with that of the best dressed man you know. We are perfectly willing to abide by your judgment then, and we know what it will be.

CHEERS IN
THE STREETSHow Crowd Took Advertiser's
News.JOKES OVER THE SPLENDID RESULTPolice Had a Job in Getting the Cars Through the Enthusiastic Throng.

A thousand college students let loose in one mob and given instructions to yell at their loudest could not have made more noise than the densely packed streets in front of the Advertiser office yielded up last night as one after another reports of Republican success all over the island of Oahu were posted up on the Advertiser's big bulletin boards and announced by voice. The hundreds shouted themselves hoarse at every mention of Prince Cupid's success, but when occasionally a bulletin announced a small Wilcox majority in a precinct a loud, ominous protest arose from the crowd. They wanted a success for Cupid—and the returns gave it to them.

As fast as reports by precinct were brought in by the Advertiser's staff, they were carefully compiled and in a moment black letters on the white boards on the veranda of the second story of the Advertiser building, surrounded by electric lights, gave the news to the crowd and the street sent up its noisy and glad applause.

The crowd was there early. It packed the street. Frequently a mule ark, usually without passengers, tried to press its way through. The driver jingled his little dinner bell as a request to humanity to move on, and the contents of the street answered with groans. A squad of policemen finally had to clear a path through the street in order to let Pain's relics drag past. A moment later and an electric car would whirl along with its powerful bells clanging, and then the crowd would have to be forced forward or backward again. It was an old story that had to be repeated many times during the night.

Two Jap women, garbed in the flowery robes of the Orient, stood in the crowd wondering what it was all about. A bulletin from the Reform School precinct went up, announcing a Republican gain over 1900. A terrific noise smote the clouds. The Japs glanced at each other, their mouths widened out into an expansive grin, those near them were interested, but the ladies did not care—they were learning the ways of America.

A man in white, with a stentorian voice, was speaking from the balcony. He was giving the crowd some comparisons between the results of the last election and this one, and at the first mention of Prince Cupid a noise like that from the roar of a hundred cannon smote the air. In a moment he had given them news of the sweeping Republican victory all over Oahu. Then the crowd could not contain itself. Hats went high in the air, and men who had never permitted a man to strike them permitted scores of hands to thump them on their backs. By this time the crowd was certain that the Prince would be the delegate. They did not budge, though. They wished to remain and cheer his every success.

It was not a Home Rule night. One of this faith, while in the crowd, kept his mouth close, and even cheered to show that he was not hostile to the man the people were choosing to lead them on to prosperity.

Between bulletins the crowd enjoyed itself talking.

"If we had Theresa's piano here to play an accompaniment to these cheers it would be hot stuff," remarked one. "Who is Theresa," asked a native. "That's Wilcox's wife."

"Who is Wilcox?" "Well, Wilcox was Wilcox yesterday, but I'll be jiggered if I know who he'll be tomorrow."

Another little batch was discussing the Prince.

"He's a fine fellow," said one. "You insult him," said another. "How's that?"

"How? Because you don't put it strong enough. He is a — good fellow."

"Guess I won't sell that sugar now. Price is bound to go up."

"Why, bless you, my boy," exclaimed a business man, "everything will be all right now. We will strike an Eldorado of prosperity."

Similar remarks were being bandied about all night, and in the wee small hours one could hear the following conversation of two business men:

COMPLIMENTS TO
THE ADMIRAL

Admiral Beckley hands us the following letters which will be of interest to the public at this time:

Ulupalakua, Maui, Oct. 31, 1902.

Admiral G. C. Beckley, My Dear Friend: I thank you for your kind remembrance. I read with great interest the marked copies of the papers, and I feel, as all of the people of this country must feel, that if we win in this night, that it can only be attributed to the masterly speeches you have made in behalf of the Prince and the Republican party. I am sure that you have made yourself a logical candidate for high office and that your hard work and great influence will be appreciated in Washington as well as this country and the reward can not be other than an appointment of some sort that will bring the name of Admiral Beckley before the entire nation.

Yours very truly,
J. H. RAYMOND.

Puunene, Maui, Oct. 30th, 1902.

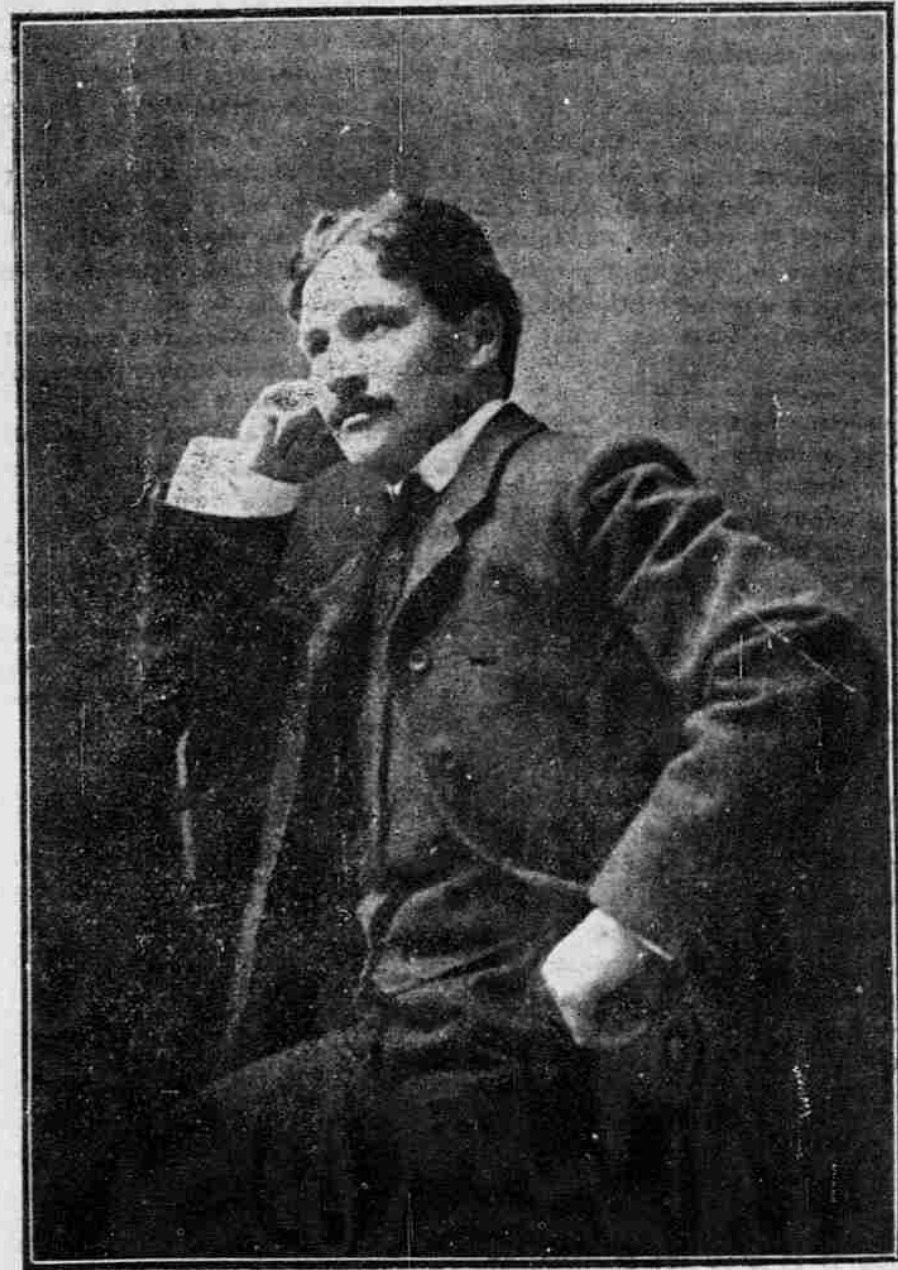

Admiral Geo. C. Beckley, Honolulu, Oahu. My Dear Sir: Your favor of the 28th inst. duly to hand relative to your support of Prince Kuhio. I am very glad that you have given your support to the Prince, and I feel that your assistance will go a long way towards securing his election. I myself believe that the Prince will be a good man to send as a Delegate to Washington; that he will be a man of his word, and will not lie to the people as Robert Wilcox has done in the past, about what he was going to do in Washington.

I am glad that Prince David has resigned from the Democratic party, and I think his resignation will throw a good many votes towards Prince Kuhio. The prospects that the Republican party will win this year, are better than they were last election, and I am very glad that you are on our side.

I am, Yours very truly,
H. P. BALDWIN.

S. F. CHILLINGWORTH.

FRANK ANDRADE.
